What are the five global megatrends?
The megatrends are technology, globalization, demographics, environment and societal changes. We cannot claim credit for identifying these influences – that merit lies with groups such as McKinsey and the Boston Consulting Group. These megatrends will re-shape the global economy over the next three decades giving us long-term visibility over which companies win and lose. Rapid technological change has rapidly reshaped our world and will continue to do so – robotic installations are forecast to grow by 10% a year for the next decade. Globalization has seen a rapid increase in the trade of goods and services around the world. Demographics also create challenges, as populations age and decline in the developed world yet are younger and growing more rapidly in the emerging markets. Environmental changes create concern – not only about the impact of carbon emissions but also the consequence of fewer resources, such as water. The rise of social media illustrates how societies are changing.

What is the advantage of investing in minority stakes?
Acquiring active minority stakes rather than majority stakes gives the fund access to a wider universe. That is because we are targeting family-run and entrepreneur-owned businesses which have no interest in selling a stake in their company to a buyout fund. As we are not competing with these funds, we can acquire assets at much better value – the increased popularity of buyout funds has resulted in too many funds chasing too few assets.

What is your track record for taking minority stakes in companies?
Despite the inherent risk of acquiring minority stakes, my team has an impressive loss ratio of only 1.3%, compared with a standard loss ratio of 15% among European buyout funds. That gives us a similar risk profile to a debt provider. Not only are we able to manage our risks well, but we also generate an internal rate of return of more than 25%, which puts us in the top quartile of private equity funds. We offer one of the best risk/return profiles in the market. Careful consideration is given to our investments. We only invest in medium-sized companies with revenues of at least €30m. We select companies with a strong balance sheet, a proven business model and long-run profitability. There must also be a strong management team. The combination of careful company selection, using our expertise to help companies to achieve their goals and efficiently structuring our minority shareholdings all contribute to our favourable risk/return profile.

How does Amundi access these family-owned and entrepreneur-run SMEs?
Amundi provides asset management products to banks throughout Europe. These banks provide services to SMEs and often act as intermediaries, introducing companies looking for equity financing to Amundi. These relationships give us access to a wide range of investment opportunities. For example, Amundi works with both Credit Agricole and LCL in France. Combined, these banks provide services to 50% of all SMEs in France. The depth of our European network allows us to cherry-pick the best deals. For example, in 2015, we were offered 350 different deals but we chose to invest in only eight.

What expertise can Amundi offer to these SMEs?
Family-owned and entrepreneur-operated SMEs look for equity capital to finance growth or to transfer an equity stake to a new investor. Growth capital might be required to make an acquisition or to fund organic growth. For these companies, the price of the equity capital is a secondary consideration – qualitative characteristics and expertise of the private equity investor are more important concerns. These companies want an investor that can interact well with the managers, the shareholders and the Board of Directors – someone that can influence rather than antagonise. In addition, they want a shareholder that can help them to achieve their strategic aims. For example, if the company wants to expand into Asia, it will look for an investor that can help with that goal. Amundi’s operations in China, India, Japan and South Korea enable these European companies to expand around the globe. In addition to our global network, we are large investors in many of Europe’s biggest companies, enabling us to facilitate introductions.
Can you talk about an investment that illustrates the fund’s philosophy?
We invested in Luneau Technology (LT) in 2014. The founders manage this company and have a significant equity stake. This company develops, manufactures and distributes equipment to opticians and ophthalmologists. LT is a high-tech medical equipment company with its own 30-strong research and development team. Impairment of vision is a significant problem among ageing populations around the globe. LT sells its products to 40 different countries, including the US, Europe and Asia. The company sells lower-cost products to emerging markets and high-tech products to developed markets. And so the company exploits three megatrends: technology, demographics and globalization. Since our investment two years ago, LT has experienced strong organic growth as well as making two acquisitions in the US and France, and a third one is planned in Asia shortly. In 2016, it generated revenues of €90m, an increase of nearly 30% over two years, and it now employs 350 people.
